Kemmler the Pioneer.

The man KEMMLER is dead, but notorious. Posterity will know him as the first person to suffer death by electricity at the nds of the law. He was a commonplace murderer, and had he been hanged in a few months would have been heard of no more. As it is he was the unwilling and unhappy pioneer in unique field of public enterprise, and name will live not only in the records of the courts of justice, but have a place in the repositories of science. Some of most learned men of our timesidges, lawyers, statesmen, electricians, argeons, and others-have contributed to notoriety. He has set a precedent, and marked a course in which, may be, many others will be doomed to follow. Of modern modes of execution the galws and the guillotine have been most enerally used.

No date can be fixed when men first dopted the rope as a cheap and handy in-rument of ridding the world of criminals, but in the olden times, when the death punishment was inflicted for theft as well murder, the custom was to attach a noose a limb of some stout tree, stand the vie tim up in a cart, adjust the knot, drive the cart off, and let death do its work. later on the gallows, the trap-door, and the dull thud" came into vogue, but there have been so many bungling hangings, so many revolting scenes about the ings, so many revolting scenes about the scaffold, that humane men have taxed their ingenuity for the invention of a mode of death that would be certain and instantaneous, and therefore more merciful.

The guillotine has found no favor with English-speaking peoples, though our mother country used the axe very freely in one period of her history, and it often happened that the excited and trembling executioneer had to make more than one stroke. This is alleged to have been the case at the decapitation of Mary Queen of Scots. The first blow but barely touched the flesh; the second sent her head rolling into the basket placed there to receive it. The French used the same clumsy method for the execution of a certain class of criminals until Dr. Guillotin secured our people that the gallows has been retained in preference to any system of be-Our New York friends, progressive and could be made instantaneous; that there would be no bloodshed, and that the body ould suffer no great disfigurement. So they adopted electricizing as the process and to prevent the public press from " re galing" their readers upon the scenes in the last hours of the condemned they made it a crime to publish the details of an execution. As the New York General Assembly, great as it is, cannot legislate for any other State, this restriction would work to the disadvantage of the New York papers if the latter suffered themselves to governed by it; but we suppose they will not, as the theory is an absurd one, and moreover is in restraint of that liberty of the press which is the bulwark of our liberties. The greatest difficulty in KEMMLER'S case arose from an unexpected source. The company manufacturing the electrical machine proposed to be used entered a most violent objection against the em ployment of their appliances for this edious purpose. They wanted no such adment. They feared that the public would turn in horror from a dynamic known to be capable of such deadly work. It is true that scores of men have been rick C. Davis.

This lodge has about seventy-five mem illed by accidental contact with electrical wires, but the inquests and investiga tions in these cases were generally so beclouded in technicalities as to leave in doubt whether the victim or the wire were in fault. In the case of a lawful execution no such obscuration could prevail. So the patentees fought the State. Expedient after expedient, device after device, was exhausted to undo the law and the sentence, but yesterday morning KEMMLER was seated in the fatal chair, and then and there put to death.

The accounts of the execution are a little conflicting, but it was not to be expected that in the first use of electricity for mountains greatly improved. ed that in the first use of electricity for this object the most desirable and potent results would be obtained. So far as the acientific world is concerned it was but an experiment, and the observations made yesterday will be instructive to those who results would be obtained. So far as the may be called upon hereafter to visit the noted. law's dread penalty upon those who commit deliberate murder.

No doubt the Auburn officers were nervous and excited. In common with the rest of the world they were without experience. When electrocution comes to be secommon as hanging very likely it will be common as hanging to the common as No doubt the Auburn officers were nermuch-and perhaps a great deal better. The law to which its origin is due was die tated by a merciful spirit. If it effects that object it will be generally adopted; if not it should be rejected.

ALEXANDAIA, August 6, 1890.

Plans are now on foot in this city to organize a camp of sons of Confederate veterans like those already in existence in so many of the southern cities. The young men here take great interest in the new move, and there is no doubt but that in a few weeks the proposed organization will be an assured fact. R. E. Lee Camp of Confederate Veterans at its fast meeting endorsed the move and appointed a committee to assist the young people with their plans. It is also said that the young ladies will organize a camp of Confederate's daughters, whose objects will be to perpetuate the great deeds of the Confederate soldier.

CARELESS SHOOTING.

The Southern Methodist camp-meeting in Turlington's woods near Keller station has been going on since last Friday. The weather has been favorable, and large crowds have been present every day. The meeting will continue till next Sunday.

The Accomac Baptist Association will celebrate its centennial anniversary at its approaching session, which will begin next Tuesday at the Hollies church, in the southern part of Accomac. The association includes the Baptist churches in Accomac. Northampton, and Elizabeth City counties and one in Pocomoke City, Md.

The session of the association will be held in the church where it was first organized just one hundred years ago. The boulding has recently been rebuilt on an enlarged and greatly improved scale, and is now one of the most prosperous in the bounds of the association. Proc. Curry and Burrows, of Virginia, and Ellis and Wharton, of Baltimore, are among the most noted divines that the occasion is expected to bring to the Eastern Shore next week.

News has just reached here of the lynching of a negro Saturday night in Russell county for assaulting a white woman. About 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon a dissolute and desperate negro—Heury Jessies—entered the yard of a respectable farmer, near Dickinsonville, where his two daughters were standing. After accomplishing his purpose he took to the wooded hills. A posse of a hundred men succeeded in capturing him that night. He was identified and then swung up to a tree and his body riddled with bullets.
